

ANNOUNCEMENT

SUBSCRIBE TO RHODORA; PUBLISH IN RHODORA!

In continuous publication since 1899, Rhodora is one of the oldest peer-reviewed botanical journals in North America. We publish a broad array of articles related to any aspect of plant science and the history of botany, including scientific papers and notes relating to the systematics, floristics, ecology, paleobotany, or conservation biology of North America or floristically related regions.

Rhodora is issued four times a year, typically totaling 450 printed pages annually.

Benefits of subscribing to Rhodora include:

Membership in the New England Botanical Club (NEBC)

Online access to current and back issues of Rhodora

Pre-print access to upcoming Rhodora content

Online access to videos of monthly meeting presentations to NEBC

Field trips and workshops for NEBC members

Reduced rates for students and discounts for family memberships

Publish your research in Rhodora!

Benefits of publishing in Rhodora include:

No page charges

Quick review turnaround and highly informative reviews

Online publication before print with citable DOI

Option to publish open access for a very reasonable fee

Color figure printing and the option to publish color figures online for a reduced price

Article archiving at BioOne-2 and JSTOR for high visibility and searchable content

For more information on the journal, visit:

<http://rhodorajournal.org/>

For information on New England Botanical Club membership and Rhodora subscriptions, contact:

Dr. Matthew Hickler, New England Botanical Club

Association Manager

nbc@rhodora.org

For questions on publishing research in Rhodora, contact:

Dr. Elizabeth Farnsworth, Editor-in-Chief

efarnsw@fas.harvard.edu